The groundwater used in aquaculture comes from our local aquifer and can be influenced by many environmental factors. Come listen to Rick Copeland of Aquifer Watch speak about groundwater and its sources. This also begins a larger discussion about developing a network of aquaculture producers and researchers dedicated to understanding the changes that are occurring within groundwater and how that potentially affects production.